The Mingo Revulgo is an eclogue satirizing the state of public affairs during the reign of Henry the Fourth, and written about 1472. Its authorship, which has never been determined, has been attributed to Juan de Mena, to Rodrigo de Cota, and also to Hernando del Pulgar. See Amador de los Rios, vii, 130, and Ticknor.

1. The first part of the document is a list of names and dates, which appears to be a record of some kind. The names are written in a cursive script, and the dates are in a more formal, printed style. The list is organized into columns, with names in the first column and dates in the second column.

2. The second part of the document is a series of short, handwritten notes or entries. These are written in a cursive script and are arranged in a list-like format. Some of the entries appear to be dates, while others are more descriptive.

3. The third part of the document is a series of short, handwritten notes or entries. These are written in a cursive script and are arranged in a list-like format. Some of the entries appear to be dates, while others are more descriptive.

4. The fourth part of the document is a series of short, handwritten notes or entries. These are written in a cursive script and are arranged in a list-like format. Some of the entries appear to be dates, while others are more descriptive.

5. The fifth part of the document is a series of short, handwritten notes or entries. These are written in a cursive script and are arranged in a list-like format. Some of the entries appear to be dates, while others are more descriptive.
